

CONTRACT LET FOR FEDERAL BUILDING.

New York Firm Will Erect the Structure for $81,805.

ORIGINAL PLANS MODIFIED

Substitutions of Material Made to Bring Price Within the Sum Available—Building Must Be Completed by November 1, 1912.

Postmaster A. E. Kurtz last evening received notification that the proposal of W. H. Fissell & Company, St. James Building, New York, had been accepted by the Supervising Architect of the Treasury Department for the erection of the new Federal building in this city. The contract specified that the building must be completed by November 1, 1912.

In order to bring the contract price within the available appropriation it was necessary to somewhat modify the plans. The original proposals were in excess of $100,000; too high to be accepted. These modifications have made it possible to award the contract and while no time is specified by the Department, in the letter to Mr. Kurtz, when the work must be started, it is expected that there will be little delay in construction. It is expected that local contractors will get a considerable portion of the work, especially for such excavation as is necessary and the foundation. Bond in the sum of $41,000 was required of the general contractor.

There will be no bronze doors or exterior frames in the building, the new specifications calling for iron. Wood doors were also substituted for the elaborate bronze portals of the original plans. Hard blue limestone will be used where granite was intended while iron and steelwork of metal was chosen in place of tile and copper on the roof.

The exterior of the building will be principally of light gray pressed brick instead of the rough brick first called for while slate treads and cast iron railers succeed the marble that it had been intended to build the main stairway. Non-fireproof construction will be followed above the first story while Vermont-Pittsfield marble is substituted for the Pennsylvania marble where it was called for in the original plans.

These changes have succeeded in bringing down the cost within the appropriation and will not seriously impair the solidity or architectural beauty of the building.

Publicity Agent Visits This Town

H. B. Lord of Baltimore, publicity agent of the Western Maryland railroad, was in Connellsville last evening and this morning. He consulted with Secretary J. Fred Kurtz of the Chamber of Commerce regarding general matters.

Mr. Lord explained that he is making a trip over the Western Maryland line, especially the towns being reached by the new link connecting Connellsville and Cumberland.

Fair Weather.
Generally fair tonight and Thursday, cooler, is the moon weather bulletin.

A Great Crowd at Shady Grove Park Attending Uniontown Merchants' Picnic

A great crowd is at Shady Grove this afternoon and it will be bigger as the day grows. Despite the fact that there will be no airplane flight, all Uniontown and a big representation from many other parts of the county, including the Yough region, are on hand. Word was received from the management of the Aviation company at the last minute last evening that owing to an accident no aviator or airplane could be sent to Shady Grove in time for a flight today.

The picnic management made every effort to get a bird man from Pittsburg, but up to noon had failed. A special train would have been hired if the consent of any of the three Pittsburg aviators could have been secured to make the flight. It was a big disappointment, but it was not due to any lack of effort on the part of the picnic Executive Committee or Manager R. S. Coyle of Shady Grove.

Practically every candidate in this county on both the Republican and Democratic tickets is present at the park today. No big gathering of Uniontown people would be complete without the central Mart. Keffer and he was very early on the ground. Ivan Rush & Son, Shady, George Patterson, Wm. McClelland, C. O.

HILL CONSTRUCTION COMPANY GET THE CUT-OFF CONTRACT.

Awarded the Work for Building the Lake Erie Connection Between Monongahela and Yough Rivers Between Fayette City and Whitsett Junction.

It was stated on reliable authority this morning that the Robert Hill Construction Company has been awarded the contract by the Pittsburg & Lake Erie railroad for the construction of the link which is to connect the Monongahela and Youghiogheny river divisions through Washington and Perry townships from Fayette City to Whitsett Junction. This link connecting two divisions of the Pittsburg & Lake Erie is expected to handle heavy tonnage as the eastern traffic originating along the line of the new Buckhannon & Northern railroad will be carried by that route. The Lake Erie already has a branch from Whitsett Junction to a point beyond Star Junction which can readily be adopted for heavy traffic.

Robert Hill, head of the construction company, is out of town today and could not be seen in regard to the report. There is little question, however, as to the authenticity. Mr. Hill, it is stated, will continue to make his headquarters in Connellsville. The

Youngsters Take to Road Just Now

This seems to be the season when small boys take to the road, perhaps in the hope of escaping the eagle eye of the truant officer, whose duties will soon begin. No less than three youngsters have been picked up by the police during the last two days.

The last arrival was Charlie Stat, a bright youngster of 14 years, who appeared in police court this morning as a sleeper. Stat had no hesitancy in telling Burgess Evans that he left Pittsburg yesterday with his older brother, whom his mother had admonished to take good care of Charlie. The brother did so by hiking to Cumberland on a freight train and leaving Charlie, who refused to go, stranded in Connellsville. The lad was permitted to go and started out for Pittsburg.

Yesterday the police picked up Samuel Pizumate, aged 11, son of Frank Pizumate of York avenue, who has been roaming around the country for several weeks. He will be permitted to go home this afternoon.

Pat Dirkin was given 48 hours for being drunk by Burgess Evans this morning. Last evening Mary Richie drew 72 hours for a Jug.

Miller Turns in Taxes to Borough

The borough was enriched to the extent of $4,507.22 yesterday when Tax Collector C. M. Miller of the West Side made returns on the duplicates of 1909, 1910 and 1911. The checks were paid in the hands of Borough Treasurer I. W. Rutter this morning by Clerk A. O. Bixler.

Miller paid $13.50 on the 1909 duplicate, $82.03 on that of 1910 and $3,113.50 on 1911. He has, up to this date, turned into the borough treasury about one-half the face of the 1911 duplicate.

Licensed to Wed.

Encampment of G. A. R. Closes

United Press Telegram.
ROCHESTER, N. Y., Aug. 23.—The annual encampment of the G. A. R. was brought to a climax today by the arrival of President Taft, and his review of the monster parade through the streets of this city.

Accompanied by Governor Dix of New York and Major General Proctor of G. A. R., the President passed the line of veterans standing ready to parade. He then reviewed the march a second time as they passed his stand. More than 20,000 veterans were in line. The line of march was shortened to prevent the veterans from overdoing their strength.

Following the parade the President was entertained at luncheon. Tonight he will speak at the campfire to be held in the Auditorium and will then leave for Beverly.

Hurt by Slate Fall.
Thomas Macofak, Slavish, aged 60 years, was caught by a fall of slate Monday morning in the Trotter mines and was painfully injured. He sustained an ugly cut on his head and his back and the back. He was removed to his home near Trotter.

VALUABLE JEWELS QUICKLY LOCATED.

Mrs. Arno Shuman Recovers
Missing Articles Lost
Monday Night.

JOHNSTON FINDS THE PURSE

He Picked It Up Near Postoffice Yesterday Morning But $7 in Cash Was Missing—Returned It to Owner Upon Learning Identity.

The purse containing jewels to the value of $600, which was lost on the street Monday evening by Mrs. Arno Shuman, was returned to its owner last evening, every article of jewelry being accounted for, although $7 in bills had disappeared. S. E. Johnston discovered the purse about 6 o'clock yesterday morning and kept it until he learned through the newspapers to whom it belonged. The money was missing when Johnston found the purse.

It is generally believed that someone found the purse where Mrs. Shuman lost it on the street, extracted the cash and then, awaiting a good opportunity, dropped the purse along Pittsburg street, near the postoffice.

Johnston appeared in the Royal hotel about 6 o'clock last evening and lost it on the street, extracted the cash and then, awaiting a good opportunity, dropped the purse along Pittsburg street, near the postoffice.

Smith Burns May Die From Injury

Smith Burns, the Tri-State telephone lineman who was injured yesterday morning along Fairview avenue, is reported in a critical condition this afternoon at the Cottage State hospital and may not recover from the effects of today's operation. He was badly crushed about the abdomen when a heavy pole fell across him.

Burns had cut the last wire on the pole yesterday when it gave way at the base. It was said that the pole had rotted beneath the surface of the pavement and the defect could not be noticed. As the wires were snipped, pending a change of poles, the guy wire contracted and caused the pole to fall in that direction.

The victim was first removed to the home of his parents on Main street but yesterday afternoon he was taken to the hospital because of the serious nature of his injuries.

Mass Meeting at S. Connellsville

A mass meeting of South Connellsville voters was held last night at the Gibson High School building to get sentiment regarding the ticket to be put in the field at the first borough election next November. Franklin Pierce acted as chairman. James T. Trimble was secretary.

Candidates who will be out for Burgess are John Davis, James M. Trimble and William Shlev. They are all Republicans. C. D. Fowler, J. E. Walmer, S. S. Kera and Charles Campbell are candidates for Justice of the Peace. Campbell is a Democrat and the others Republicans. Another meeting is scheduled to be held next Friday evening.

It is rumored that a Citizens' ticket will be placed in the field in addition to the regular Republican and Democratic tickets. The Socialists will also likely have a ticket.

Examination in Township.
An examination will be held at the High School building at Leisnering No. 1, Dunbar township, Saturday morning at 9 o'clock by Supervising Principal R. K. Smith in those students who have moved into the township since last spring and who may wish to enter the High School the coming term.

"AERIAL HOBO" IN REACH OF NEW WORD'S RECORD.

Atwood Within 45 Miles of Cross-Country Distance Mark.
Avoids Albany and Schenectady—Flies to New York Tomorrow.

CASTLETON, N. Y., Aug. 23.—With the world's record for cross-country flying only 15 miles away, Harry N. Atwood, following his little jump of 67 miles in the early hours of today, prepared to put the record to his credit before night.

Starting from Fort Plain at 7:25, the aviator brought his big biplane to the ground on a beautiful slope along the Hudson river just adjacent to this village at 9:15. He made no attempt at speed during his flight, being content to sail along at a trifle more than 30 miles per hour, varying his height from 150 to 250 feet.

Atwood kept away from both Schenectady and Albany, the two big cities on his route, flying over the suburbs. At Albany big copper pontoons were waiting for him. After he alighted here, 131 miles from his finishing point, New York, he telephoned to have them sent here. He said he would start about 1 or 5 o'clock this afternoon, and probably land at Rhine-cliff, 15 miles farther south, where he will spend the night.

On his arrival at Rhinecliff, Atwood will have covered 1,177 miles, or 13 miles more than the world's record for cross-country flying of 1,164 miles made in the recent German aviation race. There was nothing sensational in the flying today; but it serves to show what a careful man with a good machine can do. Atwood has made one record that will stand for a long time—he is still flying in the machine with which he left St. Louis, and not a single part has been replaced.

In Serious Condition.
Smith Burns, who was caught by a falling telegraph pole yesterday morning in a serious condition at the Cottage State hospital. He underwent an operation this morning and shortly afterwards today it was reported by the hospital authorities that the young man was in a very critical condition. The broken portion fell across his abdomen injuring him internally.

More Cucumbers in Bottles Turn Up

The publication in the Daily Courier of August 19 of an article relating to the growing of a 13-inch cucumber in a bottle 18 years ago, has resulted in the resurrection of two more of these intestinal disturbers that started to do business so long ago that our 13-year old friends look like an infant.

O. T. Reynolds of Dunbar, has in his possession a cucumber that was grown by his mother, Elizabeth Reynolds, 60 years ago, and is today in perfect condition.

Want Four Jurors in Beattie Case

United Press Telegram.
CHESTERFIELD COURTHOUSE, Va., Aug. 23.—The securing of four jurors was the sole active work planned for today's session of the trial of Henry Clay Beattie, Jr., charged with wife murder. As a consequence, the crowd that gathered at the Chesterfield courthouse was small.

Beattie, his debarred demeanor unchanged, was brought out from Richmond by Detective Scherdt. The temporary nervousness that he showed when he was arraigned on Monday was gone. He talked cheerfully with those about him.

Before today's session about 16 jurors will have been placed in the box. Four will be eliminated by preemptory challenge and then the 12 men who will settle Beattie's fate will be locked up until tomorrow morning when the taking of the testimony will begin.

Was Injured Attempting to Board a Freight Train Near Moyer But Does Not Lose Courage Even When the Physicians Are at Work.

Displaying Spartan courage, little Frank Keffer, aged 8, walked several hundred yards to the Moyer store with a portion of his foot ground off as the result of a mishap which is believed to have followed his attempt to board a moving freight train yesterday afternoon. Bits of flesh and blood marked the trail of the maimed lad from the point where he met with the accident to the Moyer store, where the injury was dressed by Drs. M. B. Shupe and J. C. McClenathan. The physicians are hopeful that the foot can be saved although the chances are much against them.

Little Frank was with his father, Special Officer George Keffer, in the office of Squire Colburn at Moyer but started to the store yesterday afternoon when a freight train approached. It was going slowly. The lad is believed to have attempted to board one of the cars. He is thought to have made a misstep. His right foot was caught beneath the wheels. The sole of the foot was torn off and the heel hung by a few threads of flesh. He did not scream, but pluckily continued his way to the Moyer store. Physicians were summoned and Drs. Shupe and McClenathan arrived on the same car. While awaiting the physicians the lad did not lose his nerve. Those gathered in the store were more perturbed than the victim.

The lad denied that he attempted to board the freight. He said he started to walk down to the store when the freight train approached and that, in attempting to clear the tracks he slipped and fell. The general opinion is that the lad endeavored to board the train and slipped.

The LASH of CIRCUMSTANCE

by HARRY IRVING GREENE
Author of "Yosonde of the Wilderness"
Illustrations by Magnus O. Kettner

"Good work. But easy now," he whispered as he gently removed the glass and putty from my hand and slipped them into his pocket.

"Your real work is over, and all you have to do from now on is play lookout while I take a smell around inside. Just remain here and keep your eyes and ears open for trouble below. I will not be gone long." He thrust his arm through the opening and slid the catch, raised the sash, and swung himself into the blackness of the interior. I saw the flash of his electric pocket searchlight as he threw it over the room in a quick survey, then all within became as inscrutable as ever.

Alert of muscles, I stood nervously peering into the gulf below, with my ears set to catch the slightest sound. As to what LeDuc sought in the cave-like interior where he now rummaged I had not the vestige of a notion. He had not seen fit to enlighten me of his own volition, and I had not felt like going further in an attempt to raise the screen that he had drawn between us. So far as I could analyze his sayings, he had been warning his pet about Bruce; and should that prove to be the case, I knew that when the final denouement came, I should, no matter the evidence he might be able to produce, array myself with Clere in a desperate rally to the defense of the accused one. Together she and I would fight for him to the last.

Perched as I was 50 feet above the bottom of an alley the bottom of which was shrouded in blackness impenetrable to the eye, and nervously participating in a deed the significance of which I was in ignorance beyond the fact of being aware that despite its object its perpetration was a severe violation of the law, I began to grow both uneasy and angry as I awaited my partner's reappearance. To make my position still more unpleasant I knew that we must descend by the same means by which we had ascended, and no one perchance aloft as I was could know into whose arms we might drop as we retreated down the ladder. How long LeDuc was gone I had but little idea because of the difficulty of judging the lapse of time when one is situated as I was. While it seemed a considerable period, it was possibly not more than four or five minutes before he reappeared. He came with a breath of relief.

We went down in reverse order from which we had ascended, LeDuc below me and my feet closely following his hands. So far as we were able to judge, no one had entered the alley since we had gone upward, and I felt much more at ease as upon the dangling once more I adjusted my disarranged clothes. As I did so I saw my companion stoop and apparently pick up something as we turned and hurried silently from the scene of our efforts. Once more upon the street, I ventured to ask what success he had met with. His reply was pregnant with satisfaction. "I have secured what I was looking for, but cannot be certain until tomorrow. I will let you know about it then."

"And have you it with you?" I persisted, thinking it high time he confessed a little more in me, in view of what I had done for him. He patted his pocket.

"Yes—right here. If upon an investigation made under the proper conditions by an expert it turns out as I think it will, I will name your man for you tomorrow. And when I do I am going to have you present as an interested party. By the way, here is your match box." He held out the mentioned receptacle to me and I took it with a look of surprise as I demanded that he tell me when and where he had gotten it. I was very certain that I had not handed it to him.

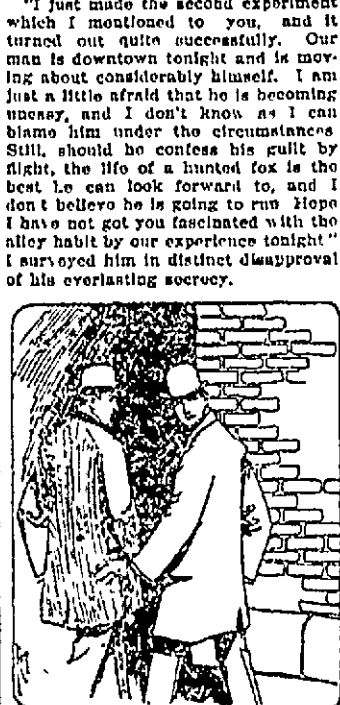

"Something dropped upon my shoulder as we were coming down the ladder and I picked this up at the foot of it when we struck earth again. It must have worked out of your pocket as we came down when you were using your arms for climbing. Great way to lose anything so smooth like that, especially from a vest pocket. Well, I guess that is about all for tonight. If you will just excuse me for the rest of the night I would like to do a little more experimenting all by my own self. Much obliged for your assistance. If I find my party it will be because of the tips and clues you have furnished me, and I won't forget you." To tell the truth I was not at all sorry to have him make his request to be excused. I had had enough experience with him for one evening, and I bade him good night with a sense of relief at the near corner. He waved his hand and turned into the straggling line of passers by.

Pondering deeply over the events of the night and with the idea suddenly popping into my head that I would do a little experimenting upon my own account, I continued upon my way for several blocks. An alley something similar to the one which the detective and I had explored lay before me and I turned into it with the intention of traversing it and catching my street car homeward bound in the street beyond. Near the further end of the way I paused, struck a match against the wall and lighting a cigar, stood for a moment with the flame in my hands as I made the investigation that I had in mind. Then casting the blaze away I passed into the fan of light that was projected into the narrow way from the street just beyond. As I turned once more into the regular course of travel I almost ran into the arms of my friend whom I had left but a few moments previously. With a mutual start we stopped backward.

"I had not expected this pleasure again tonight," I said as I surveyed him up and down. He fingered his cigar apparently a trifle annoyed that I had intercepted him; nevertheless answering me with a grin.

"I just made the second experiment which I mentioned to you, and it turned out quite successfully. Our man is downtown tonight and is moving about considerably himself. I am just a little afraid that he is becoming uneasy, and I don't know as I can blame him under the circumstances. Still, should he confess his guilt by flight, the life of a hunted fox is the best he can look forward to, and I don't believe he is going to run. Hope I have not got you fascinated with the after habit of our experience tonight." I surveyed him in distinct disapproval of his everlasting secrecy.

"Keep Your Eyes Open for Private Watchmen—They Are the Fellows We Have Got to Look Out For."

"No danger of its becoming chronic. Are you going to tell me anything yet?" I addressed him rather shortly, and as usual his head waved its negative.

"Not now. But I hope tomorrow I may be able to tell you everything that I know. Meanwhile you might bear in mind the old adage that when ignorance is bliss it is folly, and so forth." I turned abruptly away.

"Very well, I will exercise my patience. Good night again." Stepping into the street, I boarded a passing car and watched him from the back platform for a moment as he disappeared in an opposite direction. Then I found myself a seat.

I went directly home and to bed. Although somewhat tired, my excitement of the evening had rendered me thoroughly wide awake, and I slept very little. In the hours that intervened between my retiring and day break LeDuc had told me that he was positive that he knew his man, had secured the necessary proof, and I had too much respect for his ability to hold him lightly. And while I believed that he had centered his efforts upon Bruce and had built a wall of circumstantial evidence around him, there was also the sinking poignancy that he had learned things in other directions that were beyond my ken. However, I refused absolutely to allow such a possibility to occupy any real place in my mind. Still, there was a mystery about some of his actions that utterly baffled me and caused me profound regret, while as to my own experiment of the evening it had failed absolutely. I went to sleep alone in the gray of the morning no wiser than I had been when I had awakened from my last sleep.

CHAPTER XV.

The next morning I found a note awaiting me which had arrived over night in the mail. It was from Mrs. Duce and said that she could be very happy to have me accompany her on a little shopping tour that forenoon, provided I could arrange without inconvenience to be away from my place of business. I at once phoned her that I would go with her. I had never felt a greater aversion for my daily, half-mechanical work at the office than I did this bright morning, and the invitation to spend a day with the woman I loved so madly was an opportunity not to be ignored. Moreover, as my wealth had rapidly increased, the fact that I was still the daily employe of a soulless corporation at a nominal salary and must still give my attention to the petty details of journal and ledger had galled me until several times I had been upon the point of resigning. This I now decided to do at once, and sitting down at my secretary's forthwith notified her to that effect by means of a letter, giving more important business as my reason and enclosing them a check for my overdrawn salary. This radical step having been taken, and with my bridges now being burned behind me, I experienced some of the joyous sensations of an onward marching invader of a new continent. With nothing to hamper me now except the keeping of an eye upon my investments, I could give myself over to the attractions that lay by the way without the over present and pleasure marring thought of early rising and uncongenial work upon the morrow.

The automobile was at the entrance of the Arcadia; Mrs. Duce awaited me in her apartments, and together we descended and entered the machine. I gave it plenty of speed and we went whirling down the wide artery that led to the heart of the city. I told her of my resignation from druggery, and after a moment's reflection she voiced her approval of it.

"The position was but a stepping stone, and it is hardly possible that it would have ever brought you more than a hard earned living. And that is the very thing that I am anxious that you should escape. You are rapidly becoming a man of affairs and your future depends a great deal more on what you do with your head than with your hands."

It was a glorious thing to be humming along with her in that early forenoon hour, her commendation ringing in my ears and the assurance of her own blown across fresh waters exhilarating my physical senses. My enthusiasm leaped onward as lightly as a bounded rubber ball and despite her injunction to the contrary I determined to make a cast towards the subject of our marriage. But I would make it judiciously and if she cautioned me would immediately turn into some other channel. I let one hand fall upon her gloved fingers.

"If you were my wife, sweetheart, I would be the happiest man in the world today," I said, tenderly. There is an old and wise adage which says we should live to our fullest today for tomorrow we die. And it sometimes seems to me that we are pitifully wasting the most precious days of our lives; camping as it were, upon the border of the promised land and fearing to enter it. I already have enough money to last us for years, and surely with the start I now have the rest will not be long in coming. I want you to tell me—Is there any reason why you desire the postponement of our marriage except that I am in the midst of accumulating more resources?"

"None in the world. I am interested heart and soul in your success and shrink at the thought of diverting your efforts. For once married, I know that I should claim your time less easily."

"And you could marry me one time as well as another?"

"Tomorrow as well as any other day."

Within arm's length of the prize which I coveted more than all else in the world combined, the woman for whom I would have waived my claims upon immortality to have possessed at the point of yielding herself to my embrace, my tongue burst forth in an impassioned appeal. Then came with me tomorrow, sweetheart—dearest! We will be quietly married, and start at once for Europe. I can leave my interests in the hands of my brokers, who will protect me fully. We will wait for nothing. We will go to Paris, to Spain, to Algiers. We will cruise through the Mediterranean. We will summer in the Alps. We will winter on the Nile. The world shall be ours. The papers and cable will keep me in daily touch with affairs here. If all goes well for a few months, as it surely must, we will need to return, but will go on and on as you wish. None will be as happy as we, and our lives will be one long honeymoon. Nothing shall be denied you. Come." Carried away as I was by the impetuosity of my passion, I firmly believed that I had foreseen our destiny as infallibly as fate itself as I turned my glance from the flying roadway to her face. She must have caught some of my enthusiasm, for her eyes were glowing and the fingers which I held entwined themselves amongst mine.

"It is what I live for, and I have grown to picture you in my mind as the one who is to share all those things with me. But it would be terrible to awake some morning in the midst of our happiness and find it ruined. Therefore I wish you to be fully insured before embarking—not that I would love you any the more if you had a million, but because to life you have just portrayed is what we both crave. And I believe that all you have said will come true. But while I might wish very much to marry you tomorrow, I think it is better to wait."

I slipped my free arm beneath hers and drew her to me. "Make it tomorrow, dearest," I pleaded, feeling that she swayed upon the brink of surrender and that I could have taken her in my arms. She just portrayed yielded completely. "When I think how happy we would be, it seems a shameful waste of time to deny ourselves." Her bosom was rising and falling rapidly and I knew that the battle within her was raging sharply. Her reply was both distressed and beseeching:

"You must not press me any more, Tom. No woman is more human than I. You are making it very difficult for me to resist, and it hurts me to say 'no' to you. Please—please don't drive me so hard."

"Tomorrow," I insisted mercilessly, holding her still tighter and pushing my advantage to the uttermost. She averted her face, a troubled look haunting it.

"Then I will compromise in this way. I will give you your answer tomorrow. I must have one day in which to think it over. After you, I do not promise, I do not refuse, I simply demand a day of grace. You must let go of me now."

The finality of her tones told me that further pleading at this time would be more likely to jeopardize my chances than help them, but feeling confident, nevertheless, that I had won, I released her. And that she had practically made up her mind to yield I became more and more convinced during every moment of the next two hours as I attended her in her purchases of dainty handker-

"The Night Rider" Tonight. In the role of a corrupt judge who is bought by the tobacco trust to fight and head the east of 'The Night Rider,' a melodrama, which will be presented at the Solheim theatre to night by the Ives Amusement Company, plays a part that has prototypes in many sections of the country where political corruption is and has been rampant.

among forbidden things promising to meet me for lunch at the end of that time, I left her in an ecstasy and mortal man seldom attains and even then for but a fleeting moment.

It was 12 o'clock, noon, and I decided to run over to my broker's for a little talk with him while I was killing the interval of her absence. My stock had closed strong the night before after a substantial rise during the day, and there was absolutely no cause in sight for uneasiness on my part. That it would go at least 20 points higher nobody seemed to doubt, for at last the public was fairly apprised of its value and the daily heavy purchases were sending it upward by leaps and bounds. The prospect back of it was a tremendous undertaking the value of the franchise already practically inestimable, and that the enterprise would be one of the greatest money-makers of the world seemed as certain as that the inhabitants of the city would increase and multiply. I know that a ring of politicians had fattered the enterprise in the shadow of a star chamber with certain draws, yet they had been granted official sanction by the city council and that seemed to settle the matter. Whether the scheme had been carried through by bribery or not was a mooted question. Richard Mackay had been arrested upon such a charge, but had escaped through a technicality of the law.

Hints For Travelers

When a man serves as a woman's escort on a railway train he should buy her ticket, see that her baggage is checked, carry her bag etc., or pay a porter to do so, and so that she is comfortably seated. If the journey is a fairly long one and the ticket cost a few dollars or more, the woman should pay for the ticket, but if it is only a short trip and the cost of the ticket is comparatively small the man should pay for everything. If but one meal is taken in the dining car the man may act as host, but when the journey is a long one the woman should, of course, pay for her own meals.

When a long journey of some days is taken, a man will frequently find that he can serve in many little ways a woman or women who are travelling alone. This is perfectly proper if it is done with dignity. But during a run of a few hours it is not permissible for a man to try to make the acquaintance of any woman traveling alone, no matter how much he may wish to help her in various ways.

A well bred traveler will never push or shove a way into a car, but will enter quietly, following those who are ahead in the line of people who are waiting. In a car that is only partially filled it is permissible to deposit one's belongings in an empty seat, but as the train fills up one should not be so inconsiderate as to occupy a seat in this way.

The Ideal Guest.

When visiting friends or relatives a guest should adapt herself as well as possible to her new environment and bring no jarring note or undue disturbance into the family circle. There are so many little attentions that can bring comfort and joy into a household. If a hostess feels that her guest needs constant entertaining and management and special services who will not wish to repeat her invitation so soon again.

Of course no one needs to be reminded that an invitation to spend a few days or a few weeks under another's roof is a great compliment, and that it is the duty of the guest to do all that he or she can to show appreciation of the fact by entering into all of the festivities with enthusiasm and interest. At the same time one must be careful to give as little trouble as possible, especially in a house where only one maid is employed. For the time being the guest is a member of the family.

The Duties of Best Man.

"Does the best man have the wedding ring and when does he hand it over?" The best man has charge of the ring and usually places it in a pocket of his waistcoat. According to the ritual of the Episcopal church, the ceremony of placing it on the bride's finger follows the pledging of the troth. After the bride and groom have both repeated this after the minister the book of common prayer prescribes that they shall again "loose their hands, and the man shall give unto the woman a ring."

The best man should therefore give it to the groom at this juncture. In churches which do not have a printed ritual the minister would indicate the proper moment.

It is proper to send a present to the bride at any time after the day of the wedding has been set and made known to the friends.

Engagement Etiquette.

An engagement is announced by the parents of the girl either in her own home by means of notes to intimate friends or in a formal notice in the newspapers. The girl may write to her own friends. Upon hearing of a friend's engagement it is customary to write a note of congratulation. In writing to an engaged girl the proper term is to "wish her all happiness," and in writing to a man one congratulates him upon his good fortune.

An engagement may last for any length of time. Too long or too short engagements are not advisable. If an engagement exists however, it is better for all concerned to have it announced speedily.

When wedding cards are issued it becomes the duty of the prospective bride to acknowledge the receipt of every gift.

Good Form Don'ts.

Don't attempt to wear your stock collar without having it carefully boned and don't depend on pins to keep it fastened and in place. Buttons and buttonholes or hooks and eyes will answer the purpose much better and are not difficult to adjust.

Don't wear quantities of cheap false hair puffs, curls, etc. False hair is not to be utterly despised, for the girl whose nature has neglected to endow with an abundance of tresses needs a little, but choose it carefully and be sure that it matches your own hair.

Suit Case Good Form

To the inexperienced traveler it might seem strange that there is a proper way of carrying a suit case. But to the veteran tourist, who has visited many ports and climes it will seem strongly creditable. The suit case when carried, should be held an inch away from one's clothes. Unless this is done the case constantly rubbing against the cloth, is sure to leave its mark of wear and tear.

Fifty Years Ago

The titanic struggle between the North and South was being waged. The semi-centennial of this greatest of all modern wars makes everything pertaining to it of peculiar interest at the present time, and a stirring Civil War story is particularly appropriate now. It is for that reason we have arranged to print:

My Lady of the North

By RANDALL PARRISH

Author of "Bob Hampton of Placer," "Keith of the Border," etc.

This is the greatest of all the great historical stories Mr. Parrish has given to American readers. It is a swift, intense, adventurous romance, with some mystery, as much action as is possible to crowd into one story, plenty of realism of what may be termed the romantic variety, and a glow which will enlist your sympathies as well as your attention.

On as black a night as any daring soldier could ask, a cavalry captain rode out from the Army of Northern Virginia to carry certain dispatches from General Lee through the Union Lines. The officer is Captain Philip Wayne, and a gallant Virginian in every sense of the word. He is at once plunged from one dangerous adventure into another, and the dashing style in which he describes them will keep you enthusiastic and fairly breathless in your effort to keep up.

You Will Not Want to Miss a Single Line of the Story and We Strongly Advise You to Watch for the Opening Chapter

GOOD RACING ON FAST TRACK

Six Heats Required Before 2:20 Pace is Decided—Wallace's Orchestra Again Popular Attraction—Many Automobile Parties.

The four day program at the Dawson Driving Park was opened auspiciously yesterday afternoon when three baroque events and a running race were offered the more than 1,500 spectators who attended the inaugural. With Wallace's orchestra again an attraction in the grand stand and an exceptionally good first day card on the track, the spectators were more than pleased.

Scores of automobiles were parked in the paddock and beside the grandstand while dozens of other rigs were on the grounds. The usual bus service was in operation between Dickerson Run and the track, with every variety of vehicle from broken down seagulls to the latest models of automobiles being used to get to the track. The service to the park this year is up to that of former years and perhaps a little better.

The races were very interesting. The 2:20 pace went six heats before Pinkerton took down the purse, the best time being 2:17. King Ben won the 2:17 trot in four heats while straight heats took down the 2:11 pace for Lily Woodford. The running race was won by Earl Richmond.

Driver Shaffer, behind District Chimes, was thrown from his sulky in the first heat of the 2:17 trot but his mare finished fifth without a driver. Shaffer was not hurt and drove District Chimes into third money in the succeeding heats. A quarrel between two jockeys over weight was the only other incident out of the ordinary. The summary:

"Scops" Carry in doing good work with the Pirates and making a hit with the Pittsburgh fans.

Catcher Fred Mitchell, who was with the Highlanders last season, is now Rochester's star backstop.

With Mackie back in the lineup the Quakers should be able to stay in the hunt for the National League pennant.

During the Boston Red Sox's last stay at home they lost 3 out of 5 games to St. Louis and won 4 out of 5 from Detroit.

Eastern fans are eager to get a slant at Marty O'Toole, the $25,000 pitcher, who has joined the Pittsburgh team.

"San" Lajoie is doing great work with the slick and crowding Ty Cobb for the batting championship of the American League.

Now that the Tigers are playing at home, Detroit fans figure that there is nothing to it but first place for the Jennings crew.

Cleveland instead of the White Sox gets "Buddy" Ryan of the Portland team. Ryan is the holding, batting and throwing sensation of the Pacific Coast League.

The White Sox are a little leary of the Athletics. When the Sox play in Philadelphia they spend their spare time cutting open baseballs used on the Quaker lot, trying to find some phonies.

Chief Meyers of the Glants complains that Pitcher McIntyre's spit ball resembles a sprinkler cart when it flouts over the plate. The Chief says that he will wear a rubber veil.

You Must Have Piece Goods, So

Why Not Have Savings, Too.

When "Mending Day" comes each week what a search in the "scrap bag" for a short length of fabric for some particular purpose. Yes, it has happened to you and to every household that shelters more than one person. Our recent Remnant Sale left a great "scrap bag" on our counters. But no wonder! With the biggest crowd that ever attended a remnant sale in this city, closing day still found a small mountain of piece goods of all lengths.
